Drumchapel To Take Part In Groundbreaking New Health Study

Welcome to the first edition of the GoWell Newsletter. GoWell is a new research programme that will be coming to Drumchapel over the next few weeks. 700 local residents will be asked to take part, along with 7000 other households from 12 different communities across Glasgow.

Over the next 10 years more than a billion pounds will be invested in Glasgow's homes and communities, and Drumchapel is one of the areas expected to benefit from this investment. But how will we know if the money spent on improving and regenerating Drumchapel has actually created the kinds of homes and community that local people want to live in? Well that's where GoWell comes in – we would like to find out from you what you think of efforts to improve and regenerate Drumchapel and if all this investment has had an effect on your health and well-being.

By taking part in the GoWell study you will be able to tell those organisations responsible for neighbourhood renewal and community regeneration what works in your area and what doesn't. We realise it is only by speaking to local residents that the GoWell team will be able to find out if there are links between your health, home and community.

GoWell was officially launched in February this year by Community Minister Malcolm Chisholm. Mr Chisholm is pictured here alongside local community housing representatives and the GoWell Research Team.

Introduction

PROFESSOR
ADE KEARNS

GoWell is the first research and learning programme of its kind in Europe. It aims to find out from local people what they think of the efforts to improve Glasgow's homes and communities and if these improvements have had an impact on their health and well being.

Over one billion pounds will be invested in community regeneration and neighbourhood renewal in the next 10 years. We would like to find out during this time if all this investment is producing the kinds of homes and communities that people want to live in.

In addition, a major driving force behind the GoWell programme is our commitment to ensure that the views of local people are taken into account by those responsible for making decisions about future regeneration initiatives. To do this the GoWell team will produce high quality research that will engage directly with local people, policy makers and practitioners.

The GoWell programme will provide those responsible for health, housing and regeneration with the best possible information on which to base decisions for transforming Glasgow's homes and communities. We expect that the answers provided by the GoWell programme will be of great relevance to local people, local communities, local housing organisations and to urban policy makers around the world.

The GoWell programme has brought together a team of some of the UK's most experienced researchers on one of the most important regeneration and health studies ever to be undertaken in Europe.

Who will be doing the interviews?

BMG research, a well known independent research company, will be carrying out interviews with local people on behalf of the GoWell team. The information local people give the BMG interviewers will be held in the strictest confidence and will not be shown or passed onto any other organisation. Similarly, no one will ever be able to identify people, who have taken part in the interview from the answers they give.

Here is a sneak preview of what the interviewers will ask...

Here are some of the topics we would like your opinion on as part of the GoWell programme. In particular we would like to know what you think about:

- You're home and community
- You're health, lifestyle and general wellbeing and that of your family
- Local services, such as housing, transport and leisure facilities, and
- Any changes that are planned for your community

How will the GoWell results be used to improve Glasgow's homes and communities?

Your opinion on these important matters will help the GoWell team to build a picture of what it is like to live in Drumchapel and what local people would like done to improve the area. The GoWell team will use what local people tell us to help those organisations responsible for regenerating and renewing Drumchapel. Local community based housing organisations will then be able to use this information to work out what kinds of investments are effective in improving the lives of local people and the places they live in.

COMMUNITIES TAKING PART IN GoWell

12 communities have been selected to participate in GoWell. These are Carntyne, Castlemilk, Drumchapel, Gorbals Riverside, Govan, Red Road and the surrounding area, Riddrie, St. Andrew's Drive, Scotstoun, Shawbridge Corridor, Sighthill and Townhead.

IT'S ALL ABOUT YOU, YOUR FAMILY AND YOUR COMMUNITY

Drumchapel the place to be: THEN AND NOW

We spoke to long standing Drumchapel resident Ruby Bryden to find out what it is like to live in Drumchapel. We also asked her to tell us about how the area has changed over the past 40 years and what kind of improvements she feels would be of most benefit to her community.

Ruby spoke with great pride and enthusiasm of the vibrant and thriving community that is Drumchapel. She remembers fondly the excitement and anticipation of moving into her new home with her young family:

"I thought my new house was brilliant. I was absolutely delighted with my inside toilet and bathroom. We used to have to go to the steamie to have a bath so as you can imagine I really appreciated being able to have a bath whenever I wanted. My health improved dramatically after the move."

Ruby also told us that over the years it has been difficult to watch her community area become so run down:

"The council did nothing to maintain the houses in this area. We couldn't even get basic repairs done. I regularly complained at the council offices but you were treated like a number and not a person. We had to do something, so we formed the South Dean Action Group and that's when things started to improve for the better."

And now

Ruby told us that her community and the homes within it have benefited from improvements introduced by community based housing organisations:

"The housing organisations have made a big difference, a difference you can see. Some houses have been demolished and replaced with new builds and some have had internal and external improvements and upgrading. You are no longer treated like a number; you know who you are dealing with when you go down to their offices."

"I would bring back the summer activities programmes we had years ago. We need some sort of structured activity that gets the kids off the street during the summer break."

What improvements would you like to make to your community area?

Ruby told us that the one thing she would do to improve her community area is to develop more facilities for children and young people:

"I would bring back the summer activities programmes we had years ago. We need some sort of structured activity that gets the kids off the street during the summer break. I would also like to see more youth clubs and places for young people to go instead of them having to hanging around street corners."

Ruby was very concerned that in recent year's youth clubs and other such facilities had been closed and not replaced.

What do you think?

Being an Asylum Seeker in Glasgow

We went to speak with Sivaparatham Kumaravelu and Anton Kanapathipillai at their allotment to find out more about being an asylum seeker in Glasgow.

In the beginning both men and their families found it difficult to integrate into their new communities. They felt this was because a minority of their new neighbours were unhappy with asylum seekers using limited local resources.

As Sivaparatham explains:

"When my family were housed here in 2001 there were not enough play areas or facilities for the children and young people. Local residents were very unhappy that our children were using the play areas; the play areas are only very small."

"I can understand that local people were worried we were taking over but as we settled in and got to know each other, we started to understand a bit more about each other."

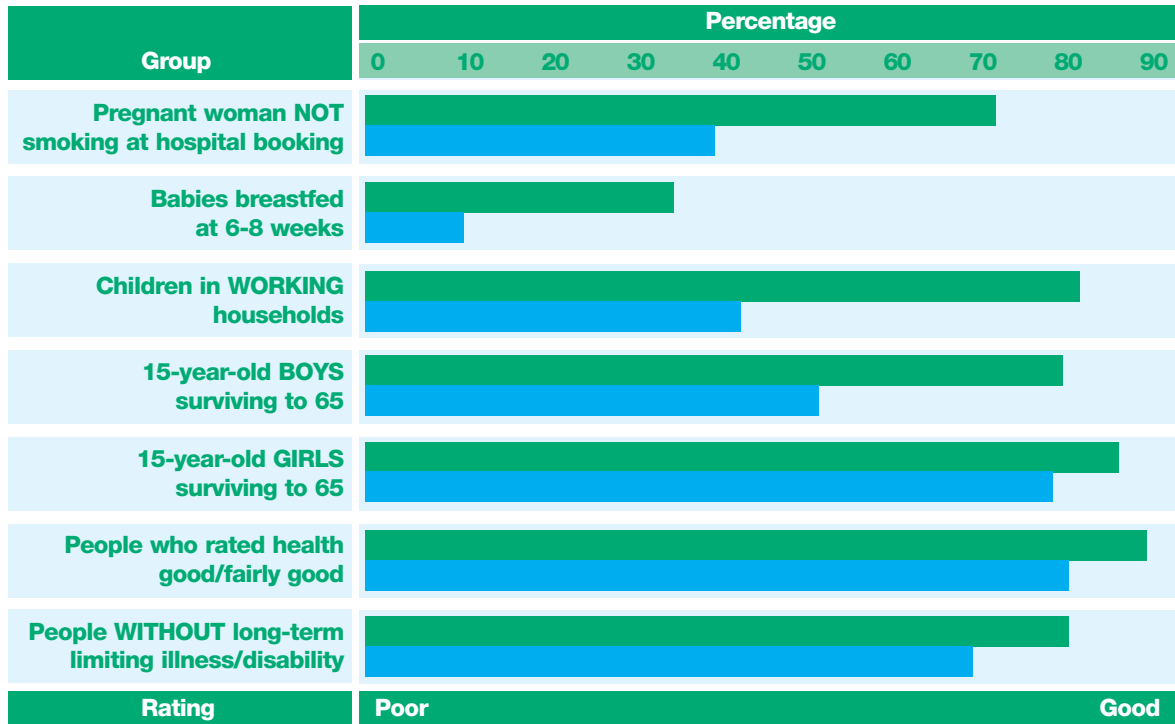

Once the families became settled in their new community and learned to speak English they had very positive and enthusiastic things to say about the help and support they received from local residents, community organisations and local community groups:

"Since arriving in Glasgow in 2001 there have been big changes in local attitudes to people seeking asylum here. I feel that my neighbours and community make me and my family feel very welcome and part of this community."

Both men felt that the community was highly responsive to the needs of asylum seekers and had played a key role in assisting them and their families to become part of the local community. They both were highly appreciative of the dedication and hard work of local volunteers in supporting them to forge a new life in Glasgow.

We thought you would like to know how the health and wellbeing indicators of Drumchapel residents compares with the rest of Scotland.*

■ Scotland ■ Drumchapel

*Data from NHS Health Scotland, for postcode sector G15 7, various years and sources, including 2001 Census.

As you can see the bar shows that all aspects of health of the people living in Drumchapel is markedly worse than for Scotland as a whole. This observation provides the GoWell team with a springboard for action over the next ten years.

About the GoWell Newsletter

The GoWell Newsletter will be published 3 times each year and is written for you and your community by the GoWell research team. We will use the newsletter to tell you about what we have found out about your local community and keep you informed as to how the information you provide us with will be used to help improve Glasgow's homes and communities in the future. We would also welcome any contributions, ideas or suggestions you might have for future GoWell newsletters. Simply send or email your news to the following address:
